

PYLOS GEOARCHAEOLOGICAL FIELD SCHOOL

JUNE 23 - JULY 20, 2025

Explore the Past – Shape the Future!

Join an intensive four-week field school in Pylos, Greece, where archaeology, geoarchaeology, and cultural heritage meet cutting-edge technology! Hosted by the University of the Peloponnese's Center for Continuing Education & Lifelong Learning and the Laboratory of Archaeometry, in collaboration with the Ephorate of Antiquities of Messenia, this program offers hands-on training in excavation, surveying, GIS mapping, UAV (drone) surveys, 3D modeling, and archaeological science.

Why Join?

This unique academic experience combines fieldwork, laboratory training, and cultural exploration. Participants will gain practical experience at excavation and survey sites while learning to use advanced tools such as GIS, drones, and 3D scanning. The program takes place in a region rich in history, where students will walk in the footsteps of ancient heroes at locations like Voidokoilia Cove, Nestor's Cave, and Mycenaean tombs. Students will have the chance to become part of Cinematic History, as the Hollywood film Odyssey was filmed right in the project area, bringing Homer's epic to life on the big screen.

Program Highlights

Designed for students and researchers in archaeology, history, anthropology, classics, and cultural heritage studies, the program offers 10 ECTS (5 US credits). Participants will engage in excavation and survey techniques, analyze ancient environments and archaeological materials, and master digital heritage technologies. Training will also include cultural heritage management, focusing on sustainable preservation strategies for archaeological sites.

Who Can Apply?

Ideal for students and researchers in archaeology, history, anthropology, classics, and cultural heritage studies. No prior field experience is required - only a passion for discovery and exploration!
